DENVER (AP) — Fast-moving storms left four Denver apartments under 4 feet of water, with residents across northeastern Colorado bracing for more rains.

The American Red Cross says it has put a local shelter on standby for people displaced from the apartment flood. No injuries have been reported, but the four units are underwater and an additional 12 units are without power after heavy thunderstorms Thursday afternoon.

Denver Public Works says several streets have been flooded.

A severe thunderstorm warning is in effect for most of northeastern Colorado until 8 p.m.
